

Jamie Sadock Adventurous Lifestyle

Jamie Sadock's personal interests tend towards the adventurous. Within the past few months she did a tandem jump out of a plane at 14,500 feet with the "Golden Night," the Army's Elite Division of parachutists. She drives a Formula One car whenever she gets a chance. And her favorite toy besides her camera (she is an avid photographer) are her motorcycles(s). She loves her iron horses as much as she did her real life horses with which she participated in Tri-State shows for 12 years in equestrian jumper events.

Jamie Sadock's mixed media photography and paintings will be featured in an art gallery in Pennsylvania in October 2006. "I'm not afraid to take chances or to risk making a statement," Jamie says, summing up her philosophy.

"Creating unique clothing is an art form for me. I've always felt that clothing represents moods and wearable art, and for me, it's an interesting challenge to be able to design clothing that can help influence people's emotions. I want them to feel elegant and special. I get the most amazing heartfelt emails and letters from people who appreciate what I create for them. I never want to let them down.

When I see my designs in action, it's really like watching paintings come to life."
